TITUS FELTEN DIES AT AGE OF 81 YEARS

Titus Felten died this morning at the Wauna Sanitarium. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from the funeral chapel of A. Carr & Son with interment in Wiltwyck cemetery. He was aged 81. Mr. Felten celebrated his 81st birthday on June 29, last. He was born on June 29, 1834, near the Dutch settlement, seven miles from Saugerties. As a youth he worked in a quarry and in 1853, at the age of 19 years, he came to Kingston He began his employment in Kingston as bookkeeper for Peter Van Vlick in Higginsville, which was then one of the prosperous business sections of this vicinity. He remained in that position for six years After leaving Mr Van Vlick's employ, Mr. Felten was bookkeeper successively for Louis Depuy for two years, Joy Brothers for three years, William C. Thompson for three years, and until Mr. Thompson's death, when he settled up his estate; Hayes & Van Nostrand of Wall street and C. & J S Burhans, remaining with the latter firm four years. The Messrs. Burhans at that time were engaged in the coal and lumber business at the corner of Pearl street and Clinton avenue on the site of the building now occupied by the undertaking firm of A. Carr & Son. The building now occupied by that firm was erected as a residence by the late J Salisbury Burhans, who died a number of years ago.

TITUS FELTEN.

Although the tintype from which this cut was made was taken more than 15 years ago, it is a fair representation of Mr. Felten as he appeared at the time of his death.

In 1871 Mr. Felten formed a copartnership with the late Cornelius Burhans, under the firm name of Burhans & Felten, and the co-partnership continued for 16 years. The coal and lumber yard occupied the present site of the Kirkland at the corner of Main street and Clinton avenue After the dissolution of the firm, Mr Felten was traveling salesman for a Buffalo lumber concern for four years, and then he returned to Kingston and erected a brick building on Broadway between Elmendorf and Downs streets, where he engaged in the fish and oyster business, which he conducted for eight years, selling out his interest at the end of that period to M. Lynch of Tannersville. Mr. Felten was connected with the H. W. Palen Company for the five years following and then with Thomas O'Hara in the coal business for eight years, when he retired.

In his younger years Mr. Felten was one of the most active volunteer firemen in the then vilage of Kingston. For many years he was a member of Washington Engine Company No. 3, whose headquarters were in the present Firemen's Hall on Fair street, occupied at present by Wiltwyck Hose Company.

Of all the interesting experiences which Washington Engine Company had, Mr. Felten recalled most vividly the work they performed on October 10, 1865, when the old Ulster County court house, which was then under the management of DuBois Perrine and Matthew Perrine, was burned.

The Ulster County House occupied part of the site of the present Kingston Savings Bank building, and some of the lots adjoining which now belong to the county. The fire swept all the buildings from the corner of Wall and Main streets, where Miss Mary Van Leuven's house now stands, as far as the court house and jail. Washington Engine Company secured its supply of water from a huge cistern which was located where E. T. Stelle's store now stands, at the corner of Wall and John streets ,and through its efforts the county court house and jail were saved from destruction.

Of the members of old Washington Engine Company, there are 26 survivors. The company was disbanded in the early 70's. The members now living, and their ages as compiled by Mr. Felten, are as follows:

Abram Hendricks, 81; Charles H. Styles, 80; James Bostwick, 79; Ex-Mayor John Newkirk, 76; George B Styles, 75; Edward W. Matheson, 73; John Woolsey, 72; John Kearney, 71; George Shultis, 70; Nelson Lonyear, 70; Robert Weeks, 68; Garrett N. Oliver of Marbletown, 67; C. V. L. Pitts, 67; Jacob Coons, 65; Eugene Winne, 65; O. R. Thompson, 64; Chester Felten of Spokane, Wash., 63; William T. Holt of New York city, 63; Supervisor Charles A. Schermerhorn, 62; Abner D. Holt, 61; George Kraft, 60; J. Augustus Vignes, 60; Isaiah Winne, 60; John Heiser, Cornelius Hume, 59.

A stir was created in Saugerties this week by the receipt by Mayor Ziegler of a communication from the New York State Civic League, with headquarters in Albany, stating that euchre playing for prizes is in the nature of gambling and it was the duty of His Honor to see that the law is not violated. The league threatened to take action against the mayor if he failed in his alleged duty in this matter The communication was aimed obviously at a card party planned for Friday by the R. A. New Paltz Church Decorations.

The Reformed Church of New Paltz, in which the ninety-ninth anniversary meeting of the Ulster County Bible Society was held recently has been entirely renovated and re-decorated, and in the re-decoration the traditions of the Huguenots who founded the church have been emphasized. The frieze of the pulpit alcove reproduces in mosaic the coat of arms of Baudoin, County of Flanders, the leader of the fifth crusade. The decorations of the alcove itself are the golde Fleur de lis of France, which emblazed the flag of Henry of Navarre, the great Huguenot king. The expense of this decoration largely was borne by the children of the late Hon. Jacob LeFever.

JUDGE HOWARD ASKS FOR NO NEW THING

Endorsement for Re-election Has Been the Rule, as is Shown by a Review of the Past 66 Years.

The parallel between the case of Supreme Court Justice Wesley O. Howard of Troy, who has announced that he will accept a renomination, and the case of Justice Aaron V. S. Cochrane of Hudson, who was re-elected without opposition at the recent election, might be extended back over the sixty-six years during which supreme court judges have been elected by the people, and compared with each case in which a judge who has served his full term has become a candidate for re-election. Since people began to elect their judges after the adoption of the constitution of 1847, the unbroken rule has been that a judge who served his full term and would accept a renomination should be re-elected. In only two cases has there been any opposition to the plan, but in each case the opposition was swept off its feet by the people, who re-elected their faithful judges,

The first of the judges to be elected and re-elected under the constitution of 1847 was William B. Wright. He was twice re-elected to the supreme court and then to the court of appeals, of which he became chief judge. Henry Hogeboom was elected in 1857 and re-elected in 1865. His was the first case to arise in the third district in which the voters insisted on the re-election of an eminently just judge. His opponent was no less a legal light than Senator Hardenburgh of Ulster county. Rufus W. Peckham, the elder, was elected in 1859 and re-elected without opposition in 1867. Upon his death in 1870, William L. Learned was appointed, then elected and in 1884 was re-elected, defeating Hobart Krom who had been nominated against him. Charles R. Ingalls, elected in 1863, was re-elected without opposition in 1871 and again in 1885. He reached the age limit in 1890 and D-Cady Herrick, who succeeded him, resigned to run for governor. Judge Hasbrouck of Kingston served one year by appointment as Judge Herrick's successor, when George H. Fitts of Albany was elected, on whose death Rondall J. LeBoeff was appointed for one year and then William P. Rudd of Albany was elected for the full term.

Judge Hogeboom's [illegible] election without opposition was followed in his line of succession. Theodoric R. Westbrook, who succeeded him, died before completing his term and Alton B. Parker was appointed to the vacancy. Judge Parker's subsequent election was without opposition.

The year 1887 saw two judges appointed to fill vacancies and elected the following fall. Samuel Edwards succeeded Judge Austin Melvin Osborn, who had been first appointed and then elected without opposition. At the close of his term Judge Edwards was nearing the age limit and declined re-nomination. He was succeeded by Aaron V. S. Cochrane of Hudson, whose recent re-election was without opposition speaks volumes for the high regard in which long and faithful public service by the judiciary is regarded in the Third district. The other judge appointed and then elected in 1887 was Stephen L. Mayham, who succeeded Judge Rufus W. Peckham, the younger. Judge Mayham retired on reaching the age limit in 1896, which year saw the election of Emory A. Chase, now serving on the court of appeals by appointment, who was re-elected without opposition at the expiration of his term in 1910.

Under the constitution of 1894, an additional judge was chosen for the Third judicial district. Alden Chester of Albany was elected to this position, and on the expiration of his term in 1909 he was re-elected without opposition.

Judge Betts served his full term but he was not a candidate for renomination. Instead he was instrumental in bringing about the nomination of the late ex-Senator Linson, his intimate friend.

There are other eminent jurists who have occupied the bench in this district. Some have held the office of supreme court justice by appointment and others served their full term but declined renomination.

Of the six justices in the Third district, three, namely Judge Chester, Judge Chase and Judge Cochrane, are serving their second term by election without opposition. Judge Chase is now serving on the court of appeals bench by appointment and the recent designation of Judge Cochrane to the appellate division will leave the seven counties of the Third district with only three judges to hold trial terms—Judge Chester and Judge Rudd of Albany, and Judge Hasbrouck of Kingston. Judge Howard, who is on the appellate division, would return to trial term work.

The course of action taken by the Third district in re-electing its judges during the sixty-six years during which judges have been elected instead of appointed certainly is a tribute to the bench, the bar, the political organizations and the voters.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 20.—Business was small on the stock exchange this morning and prices in the first fifteen minutes generally showed fractional loss. There was evidence of support, however, in a number of stocks and rallies were quickly in order, although buying was not aggressive in any issue except Eries. The first preferred and common were bought by a firm that has been accumulating the issue for some time. The common sold at 43⅞, but quickly rose ½. Guggenheim exploration was exceptionally strong, advancing ⅝ to 79, and a slight gain was made in Anaconda, which sold at 88¾. Reading, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific showed slightly on small sales. Canadian Pacinc yielded ¾ in the first few minutes, selling at 182¾. Steel common was unchanged at 86¾.

The market closed irregular. Texas Company was the most prominent feature of the trading in the last hour, advancing to 202½, against 188½ early in the forenoon. Distillers Securities was also active and strong, moving up over 3 points to 48. California Petroleum made a gain of over a point, selling at 27¼. A better tone was shown in the leading industrials, with steel common in good demand at a fractional advance and such stocks as Erie, Anaconda and Union Pacific also made fractional upturns. Governments unchanged; other bonds strong.

INDUSTRIAL HOME NEEDS YOUR HELP

Innocence always has been pictured as a child. In every age and every clime particular attention has been given by men and women to the children especially those who are helpless. Children have nothing to do with the responsibility for their condition. Nobody knows to what heights, or depths, the child may go, but human nature is hopeful for the best and therefore mankind safeguards the child and endeavors to make the pathway such that the tender little feet may be attracted to the right way and reach maturity well developed to meet the problems that will arise and then in their turn care for the children of a future generation. It is as much man's duty to look ahead for the future of the race as it is to devote his time to present day problems, and the race only can prosper in proportion to the right care and right ideals instilled in the minds and hearts of the children. At Christmas men and women find inexpressible joy in delighting heart by gifts. During the remainder of the year men and women to a large extent are devoting their time and attention to interests which lie closer to themselves and their own homes. In America since the beginning of the colonies there has been a custom that at the close of the harvest, there shall be a day set apart for Thanksgiving, and in accordance with this custom and the proclamations of the president and the governor, Thanksgiving Day will be observed on Thursday of next week. To those whose homes are brightened with children Thanksgiving Day will be happier. But there are homes where the children will be alone except for those whose employment or self sacrifice leads them to exercise supervision and care over the little one. Such homes are those which have been described as "being spelled with a capital H." The Industrial Home of Kingston comes within that classification. The home is not self supporting; it depends on philanthropy for its continued success. The home is in need of nearly everything which an ordinary home needs, but the need is on a larger scale. Will Ulster county respond to its appeal for help and make for the children at The Industrial Home a Thanksgiving Day that will be something more than a mere name?

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1407—A Dainty Frock for Mother's Girl.

As here shown embroidered batiste in a pretty rose shade was used. The model is nice for organdie, lawn, gingham, voile, crepe, challie, or dimity. It may be finished without the bolero, with a round yoke of contrasting material. The dress would be lovely for party wear in crepe de chine, or embroidered voile, combined with soft silk, or it could be made of linen and trimmed with lace and insertion. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 2½ yards of 36 inch material for a 10 year size, for the dress and ¾ yard for the bolero.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by The Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

FARM BUREAU MANAGERS CONFER

Manager Hook, of the Ulster County Farm Bureau, has returned from the third annual conference of Farm Bureau Managers which was held at Ithaca. In connection with the conference of managers the thirteenth annual Normal Institute was also held and was attended by the farm bureau managers.

Ways and means for the improvement of farm bureaus were discussed and systems for greater effectiveness were talked over. Several talks were given by representatives of the United States department of agriculture and the state college of agriculture on additions made on systems regarding farm bureau work.

Prof. W. H. Hurd, state leader of the work in Massachusetts, told of the method of carrying on the work in that state and Dean Galloway spoke of "The Future of Farm Bureau Work."

Ways and means were discussed and recommendations drawn up which will be available to all of the thirty-four farm bureaus in the state.

The seventeenth annual Normal Institute which was held in connection with the farm bureau managers' meeting, was also attended by all the managers and various scientists from Geneva and the college of agriculture supplied information on the latest findings in the science of agriculture Commissioner of Agriculture Wilson was present and gave an address on "Functions and Purposes of the Department of Agriculture" Hon George L. Flanders, counsel for the New York State Department of Agriculture, gave three discussions and interpretations of agricultural laws which have been drawn in the interest of the farmers.

The conference was one of the most successful ever held and the information given the managers of the farm bureaus will be available to all members of farm bureaus and will be instrumental in saving many crops during the year.

Nature Always Active.

It is known that every particle of the earth is in a state of constant activity. Nature abhors stagnation as it abhors vacuum. Even the stagnant, smelly pool of water generates myriad forms of life. Every particle of what we call a stone has a chemistry that is ever changing form. No matter how infinitesimal the infinite atoms of the combined elements of our sphere not one is in the same place today that it knew yesterday. Every hour, every moment experiences change.

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm is always connected with the senses whatever be the object that excites it. The true strength of virtue is serenity of mind combined with a deliberate and steadfast determination to execute her laws. That is the healthful condition of the moral life; on the other hand, enthusiasm even when excited to representations of goodness, is a brilliant but feverish glow which leaves only exhaustion and languor behind.—Kant.

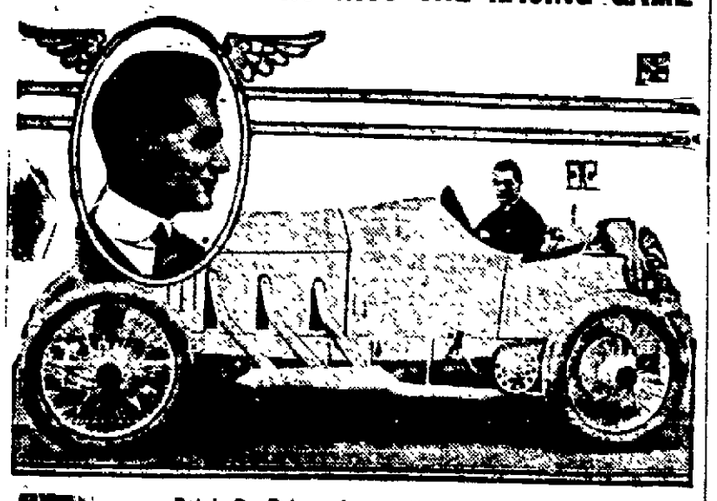
DE PALMA'S ENTRY INTO THE RACING GAME



Ralph De Palma, One of the Speed Kings.

(By FRANK G MENKE.)

Ralph De Palma owes his entry into the automobile racing game to the fact that he borrowed a bicycle something like twenty years ago, used it for the first time while out delivering a mess of groceries and busted the machine—and nearly busted his young frame—by getting into a smashup while coasting down a hill.

When Ralph returned to the owner of that bike the fragments of his machine, the owner wanted to assassinate Ralph, but Ralph saved his hide by agreeing to pay the bike owner for the damage done as soon as he could gather in the mazuma through the medium of his weekly stipend as a grocery boy.

However, the bike owner became impatient because payments were slow, and he approached Ralph on the subject.

"I'm doing the best I can," explained Ralph.

"Well, your best don't suit me," responded Ralph's creditor. "You gotta come through faster. If you don't I'll bust your beezer. See?"

Ralph gazed upon his creditor, noticed that he was four or five years older, four inches taller and about 35 pounds heavier—and Ralph immediately "saw."

"Gimme a few days to think this over," asked Ralph. He got it. During those days De Palma racked his brain for some plan whereby he could raise funds quickly, but none came forth until one day he saw a billboard telling about a bicycle race to be held in Buffalo, with cash prizes for the first eight men finishing

"Gee whizz," ejaculated Ralph. Now it may be explained that after that smashup Ralph had decided never to do any more riding. But sometimes circumstances alter cases—and cause a change of mind. That's what the circumstances did for Ralph and he quickly hunted up his creditor.

"Say, didju get that bike fixed up yet?" he asked.

"Yes; but she ain't as good as she was when she was new."

"Oh, that's all right," said De Palma. "I don't care much about that—just so long as she'll ride. Now, here's the scheme: You lend me that bike again and I'll practice up on it. Then I'll enter the races here and if I grab off one of the prizes there'll be enough money in it for me to pay you what I owe you. And if I win one of the big prizes I'll buy you a new bike in addition to paying you what I owe."

The creditor thought over the matter, deliberated on the wisdom of entrusting his bike again to the daredevilishness of De Palma—but finally decided to take a chance.

Well, the De Palma kid entered that race—a 12-hour affair—and won it.

"That decided me that there was money in the racing game," said De Palma. "I knew there were risks, too, but life is just a gamble. In racing one runs a big risk but plays for high stakes. I liked the thrill of racing—and I stayed in the bike game

"Later I got into the motorcycle racing game and afterward graduated into the automobile game. But I never would have become a racer if it hadn't been that I was forced to raise money quickly under penalty of having my nose busted. Sometimes accidents keep men out of the racing game. That first accident of mine got me into it."

De Palma entered the automobile racing game in 1907 and since then has won 225 races. He has finished in the money in something like 250 others, and his total winnings have been in the neighborhood of $500,000.

"But, you know, I didn't get all that money," explained De Palma. "In many of the races I ran I had agreements with other drivers that we'd split what we made That, of course, let the other fellows in on my share. Furthermore, I sometimes had agreements with the concerns that owned the cars that I drove that they were to pay me a regular salary each year and I was to give them 60 per cent of my winnings. Another 10 or 20 per cent of the winnings went to my mechanicians.

"It's a great game, this auto racing. It's dangerous, yes, but I like it—I like the thrill that comes through eating up space and I hope that I can stick to the game for many years to

DID WILLIAMS LOSE TITLE?

Fight Fans Still Wonder If Baltimore Bantamweight Really Lost Championship to Ertle.

Boxing fans are still wondering if Kid Williams lost his bantamweight championship of the world to Johnny Ertle, the little St Paul sensation, when Williams recently fouled him in the fifth round of a scheduled ten-round no-decision fight.

If this contest had been listed as for the bantamweight championship of the world, then Williams lost his crown; but as it was a no-decision, ten-round contest, without any agreements being made as to whether it was for the title, it is unfair to the Baltimorean to say he lost his title.

The match wasn't arranged for the championship. The boxers failed to weigh in at 116 pounds ringside, the championship weight, although both may have been at the required poundage, and no other championship rules governed the contest

The best way for Williams to cover up this accident would be to give Ertle a chance at the bantamweight crown over the 15-round route in Baltimore, or for 20 sessions in New Orleans.

First Tie Ball Game Played 61 Years Ago

The first tie game in baseball history was played in New York 61 years ago, October 26, 1854. It was called on account of darkness at the end of the twelfth inning, with the score 12 to 12. The contending clubs were the Gothams and the Knickerbockers rival aggregations for New York's baseball honors, the Knicks being the first regular baseball club ever organized. The Knicks were in the lead by a score of 11 to 9 at the end of the ninth inning, and under modern rules would have won the game, but in those days the winning team had to score 21 runs, or "aces."

Surprise of Swedish Games.

The big surprise of this year's Swedish championship games was the defeat of Ernest Wide, Sweden's great Olympic runner of 1912, in the 800-meter race. A. Bohn of Stockholm beat him by more than a second in 1 minute 59 2-10 seconds. The Swedes have added the 400-meter hurdles and throwing the weight to their championship program.

Approve Summer Baseball.

Summer baseball was approved by University of Chicago students by a 331 to 268 vote. The students voted on the abolition of the conference rule as a side issue to the regular class elections. Only men were allowed to vote on the question and those who had not given the subject consideration were urged to leave their ballots blank.

Worms Used in Medicine.

The earthworm, or the common fishworm, was utilized by the medical practitioners in Europe two and three hundred years ago. The worms were for internal administration, and sometimes made into an ointment or embrocation for external use.

Near End of His Patience.

A Generation.

Webster merely defines a generation generally, as "the average life of man, or the ordinary period of time at which one rank follows another, or father is succeeded by child." The Standard dictionary says: "Commonly estimated at one-third of a century." The Century dictionary states that "the historical average is commonly reckoned at about thirty years."

KINGSTON, N. Y., NOV. 20, 1915.

Indications are that great success will attend the efforts now being made to secure a large sustaining membership for the Bureau of Social Service in this city. Citizens are accustomed to being asked for charitable contributions and are naturally disposed to consider this request as being like the others. This is far from the truth. Heretofore whatever has been given has been like water spilled on the ground. The hungry have been fed and the naked clothed, but they soon became hungry and naked again, so that their misery was merely prolonged. The aim of the Bureau of Social Service is to cure rather than simply alleviate poverty, and to this end will strike at the roots of the evil. Money contributed to its treasury is a good investment, since it will be used to diminish the necessity for future contributions. Of course, one of the obvious remedies is to decrease the number of unemployed, since only a small fraction of the poor are in that condition through refusal to work when a job is offered them.

This subject was discussed very thoroughly at a recent meeting of the Committee on Unemployment of the Mayors' State Conference, but nothing of much practical benefit resulted. It was declared at the meeting that a large majority of the mayors of the State do not regard it as feasible for cities to plan a program of needed public work over a period of years, leaving a reserve each normal year to be undertaken in times of unusual unemployment, because of frequent changes in administration, charter restrictions as to financing and the limited amount of work that can be done in winter, when idleness is most acute. Unemployment would seem to be a problem for each community to solve for itself. Sometimes a municipal government can do a little, but the bulk of the burden must be borne by some society of citizens like our Bureau of Social Service.

While it is usually highly improper for a municipality to do unnecessary work for the purpose of creating jobs, that is something which private citizens may well do. Almost every property owner has in mind some improvement which he is but half decided to make. Unskilled labor can be thus employed to a considerable extent and the pauperization of willing workers may thus be avoided. The Bureau is asking not only, "How much money will you contribute?" but "How much work can you furnish?" If our citizens respond we shall soon be able to boast that nobody but sick people in Kingston are objects of charity. But that delectable condition can be reached only by concentrated effort through one society which represents all religious, social and political elements, as does the Bureau.

The Utica Observer comments adversely on the project of the State to construct a half million dollar bridge across the Mohawk River at Schenectady and avers the Electric City wants it so it "can communicate readily and through beautiful surroundings with Albany." The Observer is a little mixed in its "geography," for as it happens Schenectady is on the Albany side of the Mohawk River and its people would not cross the bridge to go to the capital unless they wanted to see Utica first, which may be doubted. The proposed bridge is intended as a part of the main highway between the Hudson River and Lake Erie and has been endorsed by automobile clubs, business organizations and in some instances common councils throughout this section of the State. Travel now is dependent on an antiquated toll bridge, which with its approaches is flooded when high water comes. The Utica contemporary says Schenectady "is rich enough to build its own bridges," and perhaps it is, but this bridge is needed less by the Dorp than it is for general travel and for this reason it is a state project, the same as the bridge being built as a trunk line entrance into Albany and the bridge planned to span Rondout creek as a similar entrance into Kingston.

Included in the list of constitutional amendments and propositions rejected wholesale at the late election was a measure for the re-apportionment and use of $2,500,000 of good roads money, a part of the second $50,000,000 bond issue. The defeat of this proposition is most regrettable and was due apparently to the fact that no consideration was given to the matter by the voters, who were out to make a clean sweep of the constitutional questions submitted to them. A considerable portion of the proceeds from the first bond issue of fifty millions was voted out by Tammany Legislatures to further road construction in certain counties at the expense of others. To prevent anything like this being done under the second bond issue, the constitutional amendment provided that the $50,000,000 should be apportioned among the counties according to population, wealth and road mileage. Such apportionment was made some years ago, each county being credited with its share of funds for "state" and "county" roads. Under this apportionment, some counties received more money for trunk routes than was needed to complete them and other counties did not receive enough. The surplus of the former class of counties amounts to $2,500,000 and under the proposition just defeated this would have been used in other counties where needed, but as the matter stands the money will go into the highway sinking fund. It is to be hoped no more time than necessary will be permitted to pass before the proposition is again referred to the people, so that all the great trunk routes extending through the State can be connected up and completed.

FOLLOWED BAD EXAMPLE.

Glass Smashers Plead They Did Only As Others.

John Christiana, 11 years old, and Herbert Hargraves, 12 years old, both of Clinton avenue, were arraigned before Recorder Lang in children's court this morning charged with malicious mischief. Both boys were on Railroad avenue on Friday evening and amused themselves by throwing stones through the glass windows of a taxicab owned by the Kingston Taxicab Company. The taxi lay in front of the garage on that street. The boys were placed under arrest by Policeman Fout. This morning they claimed they saw three other boys throwing stones at the taxi and they followed the example set and acknowledged that they broke at least two of the glasses. Recorder Lang held the matter open for a week to ascertain the amount of damage done by the boys who were told to bring in the names of the other three boys who they said were also throwing stones at the machine.

Sunlock, $16,000 Winner, For Sale.

Saugerties, Nov. 20.—On Sunday night the steamer Ulster will take from the Saugerties Farm to the Old Glory sale of trotting and pacing stock, to be held Wednesday of next week in Madison Square Garden, New York city, nine head of thoroughbreds, among them being Sunlock, winner of $46,000 the past season. The consignment will be in charge of Trainer Townsend Ackerman and assistants.

An Alcoholic Deposit.

Stanley Van Aken of Deposit, N. Y., was picked up on Broadway near Railroad avenue this morning by Policeman Reardon on a charge of public intoxication. Van Aken was so drunk that he was unable to help himself and he was taken to the county jail and locked up to give him a chance of getting sobered up before being arraigned before Recorder Lang.

German Tact.

The Germans may be heavy handed, but at any rate they do not think so. Thus, at the German-American Chamber of Commerce in New York a German-American related the other day an example of what he called the kaiser's exquisite tact.

"The kaiser's tact is exquisite," he said. "He abolished some years ago in court circles the old German fashion of tucking the napkin under the chin. But an old nobleman dined with him one evening at Potsdam who did not know the new rule. With that tact, what exquisite tact, the kaiser set him right!

"When the old noble tucked his big white napkin under his chin the 70 or 80 other diners were horror-struck, but the kaiser looked at the old fellow with twinkling eyes.

"'My dear sir,' said the kaiser, pointing at the napkin with his fork, 'my dear sir, are you awaiting a visit from the barber?'

"The old fellow flushed scarlet and tore the napkin off his chest. The guests, led by the kaiser, burst into roars of mirth. Thus, thanks to the exquisite tact of Wilhelm II, the awkward incident passed off without embarrassment."—New York Herald.

Why They Wept.

Two Irishmen entered a restaurant and ordered dinners. They asked the waitress the price of everything she brought in, and on bringing in some tabasco sauce she informed them that it was gratis. Mick took a large spoonful, bringing tears to his eyes.

"What are you crying for?" says Pat.

"Oh," says Mick, "it's just twelve months today since the boys hung poor ould father."

Shortly afterwards Pat took a spoonful of the tabasco, which produced the same effect as on Mick.

"And what are you crying for, Pat?" asked Mick.

"Oh," replied Pat, "I'm crying to think they didn't hang you along wid your father."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

A Celebration.

When E. Alexander Powell met a French sergeant in the trenches, and they discovered that both were from New York state, the Frenchman celebrated a sort of Old Home Week by bring a machine gun at the German trenches. Mr Powell tells the story in Scribner's.

"The sergeant in charge of the machine gun, taking advantage of a lull in the rifle-fire which had crackled and roared along the trenches since dawn, was sprawled on his back in the gunpit reading a magazine. What attracted my attention was its being an American magazine.

"'Where did you learn to read English?' I asked him curiously.

"'In America,' said he.

"'What part?' said I.

"'Schenectady,' he answered. 'Was with the General Electric until the war began.'

"'My people live in Syracuse.'

"'The hell you say!' he exclaimed, scrambling to his feet and grasping my hand cordially. 'I took you for an Englishman. From Syracuse, eh? Why, that makes us sort of neighbors, doesn't it? We ought to have a drink on it. I suppose the Boshes have plenty of beer over there,' waving his hand in the direction of the German trenches, of which I could catch a glimpse through a porthole, 'but we haven't anything here but water. I've got an idea, though! Back in the states, when they have those Old Home Week reunions, they always fire the town cannon or an anvil. So what's the matter with celebrating this reunion by letting the Boches have a few rounds from the machine gun?'"

Not to Grow Currants.

Many of the fruit growers in the vicinity of Highland are pulling out their currant bushes, believing the ground can be used to better advantage. The last season prices were low and at last there were no prices at all. It has seemed to the farmers a waste of time, energy and money to raise currants.

COUNCIL REJECTS JITNEY ORDINANCE

Two Petitions to Operate Buses Had Been Received—$50,000 to be Borrowed for City Expenses—New Street to be Laid Out.

The common council held a busy session on Friday evening, turning down a jitney bus ordinance, settling a $1,000 damage claim for $200, deciding to lay out a new city street, and adopting Mayor Canfield's plan to borrow $50,000 to meet the running expenses of the city until the February tax collection period, and transacting other business. Alderman Schilp's inquiries regarding the office of city poundmaster led to his being appointed by Mayor Canfield at the meeting but the city fathers adjourned before it could be ascertained whether the alderman was willing to accept the honor or not. President Connelly presided at the meeting with Aldermen Schick, Schilp, Leverich, Kirchner, Moyle, Martin and Jenks present.

A petition of property owners in the Seventh ward addressed to the fire commissioners asking that the fire limits be extended to include West Strand to Wurts street to Spring street to Broadway to West Strand, was forwarded to the common council and referred by them to the committee on laws and rules and corporation counsel to report back at the next meeting.

The Jitney Question.

At the last meeting of the common council a petition had been received from the Ashokan Garage for permission to operate a jitney bus line and Friday evening another application was received from Richard M. Wright of the town of Shandaken who intends to run from Margaretville to Kingston. All he wanted was permission to run his line over certain uptown streets. No passengers would be carried between points within the city. This request was evidently made in order to safeguard him from any adverse construction of the law, but could be granted only by adopting an ordinance providing for jitney busses generally.

At the last meeting Mayor Canfield and Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier had been requested to draw up a jitney bus ordinance. The ordinance they had prepared was presented at the meeting and read. The ordinance was a lengthy one and contained seven sections. When put to a vote it was lost, three aldermen, Schick, Kirchner and Martin voting "no," while Aldermen Connelly, Schilp, Moyle, Jenks and Leverich voted in the affirmative. In order to pass it needed a majority vote of the common council.

Damage Claim Settled.

The auditing committee reported that in regard to the claim of Jessie Terwilliger against the city to recover $1,000 damages for injuries sustained by a fall on an icy sidewalk in front of the Woolworth five and ten cent store on Wall street, it had met with John W. Eckert, her attorney, and after talking the matter over had finally decided to settle the claim for $200. The report was unanimously adopted and a warrant ordered drawn for that amount.

The committee also reported the street department payroll of $3,744.17 and the city engineer's payroll of $62 and warrants were ordered drawn in payment of same. Bills and claims against the city for the past three months were also audited and ordered paid.

Combusto Device Accepted.

The ways and means committee reported in regard to the Combusto device to save coal in furnaces and stated that the device had been placed on the city hall furnace and from tests made worked in a satisfactory manner and that Rowe & Rightmyer be paid the sum of $100 for the device. On motion of Alderman Schick a warrant was ordered drawn in payment.

U. & D. Check Accepted.

The committee on laws and rules reported on correspondence between the Ulster & Delaware Railroad, through H. H. Flemming and City Engineer Codwise which had been referred to that committee and which correspondence contained a check for $2,161.97 which sum the railroad company deemed a fair and just allowance for portion of work done by the city and chargeable to the company for improvements of Ferry street. This sum is $584.55 less than the sum apportioned against the railroad for paving that street, but that the contention of the railroad company seemed fair and sufficient to cover actual cost to the city for such work and that the check be accepted. Alderman Schick moved that the report of the committee be approved and the railroad company's check accepted. Carried.

Mayor Canfield's Message.

Mayor Canfield sent a message to the common council calling attention to the change in the fiscal year due to the adoption of the new city charter and recommended that an amount not to exceed $50,000 be raised to pay the running expenses of the city until the tax collection period.

The mayor's message in brief stated "One of the changes provided by our new city charter is a change in the fiscal year. The fiscal year heretofore has begun on December 1, and ended on November 30. Under the new charter it will correspond with the calendar year and will begin on January 1 and end December 31 of each year. With this change the budget will be made up by the administration in office in December but it will be passed upon, and if necessary, revised, by the administration in office in January. In connection with the change in the fiscal year there is a change in the time of payment of taxes. The taxes will be collected the coming year in February instead of January.

"These changes provide a situation where city will have to provide funds for thirteen months in the coming budget instead of twelve months. It likewise means that the city will have to provide funds temporarily to conduct the business of the city and its various departments from the end of the year on November 30 or from whenever the funds of the departments may become exhausted to about the middle of March when substantial tax payments will have been made.

"When the budget was made up last year no provision was made or could be made to finance the city or to carry it along until February of 1916, as the charter amendments were not enacted until several months later after the budget had been made up. It appears that all of the departments have probably kept within their respective budgets except perhaps that the street department exceeded its appropriation to a certain extent. There was about $6,000 provided in the budget for oiling purposes; whereas under the general damage and for oil bound construction and in pursuance to resolutions of the common council calling for construction of oil bound roadways and for oiling streets, about $8,000 was expended for that purpose.

"The moneys necessary to financially carry the city through the extra additional month, and for the purposes aforesaid and until the collection of taxes in February, will, of course, have to be provided in the next annual budget. In order that the same may be taken care of in advance, and in order that the various departments of the city may temporarily be provided with a necessary part of their moneys in advance of the February collection, I suggest and recommend that the proper official or officials be empowered to borrow upon notes payable not later than March 15, 1916, such sums as may be necessary between now and February not exceeding $50,000.

"As stated these moneys will have to be provided in the budget whether any amount is borrowed or not, and the only additional expense involved by the borrowing will be the interest charges. I am of the opinion, however, that such action would be better than leaving the departments without working funds and salaries, etc., unpaid during the extra period and until the February tax collection."

Mayor's Plan Adopted.

On motion of Alderman Moyle, the mayor and city treasurer were authorized to borrow such sums as shall be deemed necessary not exceeding however, the amount specified by Mayor Canfield.

New Street to be Laid Out.

Mayor Canfield also sent in another communication relative to Emerick street and submitting propositions received from the Universal Road Machinery Company to donate land and from the New York Central Railroad to contribute $600 for acquiring land necessary in laying out this new street.

At the present time the residents on Emerick street wishing to get into Stephan street have to go past the plant of the Universal Road Machinery Company crossing the West Shore tracks to Foxhall avenue and then south for a short distance and again cross the railroad tracks into Stephan street. By the plan outlined in the mayor's message the Universal Road Machinery Company donates a piece of ground in the rear of its property about 126 feet in length and 40 feet in width. This provides for one-half of the new side street. The other plot of ground is owned by the Durlin family, who have offered to sell it to the city for $600 and the contribution from the New York Central would cover that cost. The only cost to the city will be the grading of the street, which is a short one. This eliminates the grade crossing at the uptown end of Emerick street and will provide for a needed side street connecting Emerick street and Stephan street.

Alderman Schick moved that the offers be accepted and his motion was unanimously carried.

Street Oiling Cost $7,884.

Street Superintendent Van Keuren submitted a report showing the actual cost of oiling the streets of the city the past summer amounting to $7,884. The report was filed.

The Gas Question on Lucas Avenue.

At a recent meeting of the common council Alderman Martin offered a resolution that the matter of extending a gas main on Lucas avenue be taken up by the city with the public service commission and the resolution was referred to the corporation counsel to investigate. A petition signed by 17 property owners was also submitted. Corporation Counsel Brinnier submitted his report at the meeting on Friday evening and stated he had taken the matter up with the gas company who had written him that two of the signers to the petition did not own property on that street and that to lay the 3,200 feet of gas main would cost at least $2,500 and the company did not believe the business from fifteen customers would be enough to warrant the outlay. The company also stated that the electric service had been extended out that street and that some of the petitioners were using electricity. Mr. Brinnier called attention to a section of the law and expressed the opinion that it was up to the property owners if they did not think they were getting a square deal and could take up the matter individually with the public service commission.

Alderman Martin moved the report be placed on file.

The Hudson Street Sewer.

City Engineer Codwise submitted a report regarding the petition of property owners abutting on Hudson street to have a sewer laid in that street. He said that the signers of the petition owned less than 800 feet of abutting property while the street was at least 2,000 feet long. However, he had estimated the cost of laying the sewer and owing to the rocky condition of the road bed estimated the cost to be at least $10,000. The report was filed.

Greenkill Avenue Sewer Cost.

City Assessor Block filed a certificate of 75 per cent of the cost of the Greenkill avenue sewer, amounting to $1,287.82.

Alderman Martin for Alderman Connelly offered a resolution that the assessment be confirmed and warrant for its collection issued. Carried.

Resolutions Offered.

The following resolutions were offered:

By Alderman Schick that the property owners on Smith avenue between Garden street and the West Shore railroad had failed to lay sidewalks and that street superintendent do so and charge expense to the owners. Referred to street superintendent with power.

By Alderman Leverich that an incandescent light be placed on North street between the Gardner and Dwyer properties. To committee on ways and means.

By Alderman Leverich that street superintendent fix culvert on North street near the Grimes residence. Referred to street superintendent.

By Alderman Schick that an arc light be placed in front of the Church of the Comforter on Wynkoop Place. Carried.

By Alderman Kirchner that catch basin, corner Abeel and Ravine streets be cleaned. Referred to street superintendent.

By Alderman Schick that water commissioners extend water main on Lincoln street between Clifton avenue and Florence street. Referred to city clerk to notify water board when street is graded.

By Alderman Martin that committee which was appointed to make test of street lights report at next meeting. Referred back to committee.

By Alderman Martin that street superintendent fill holes in Washington avenue alongside viaduct to Taylor street. Referred to street superintendent.

By Alderman Martin that chief of police notify property owners on northwest corner of Main and Green street to relay flags in sidewalk on Main street. Carried.

By Alderman Martin that street superintendent change location of catch basin from in front of Excelsior Hose Company house on Hurley avenue to about ten feet west of present location as basin is under a bridge. Committee on streets and sewers.

Schilp Appointed Pound Master.

Before the meeting adjourned Alderman Schilp said he would like to ask Mayor Canfield, who was present, regarding the office of pound master and if it was vacant at the present time. He said that in his neighborhood the cows got in gardens and as a result it was hard to secure any crops. He had a cabbage patch but before he could gather the cabbage in it had been eaten by cows.

Mayor Canfield replied with a smile that he had received no applications for the position and he had not sought for any and that the office had been vacant since George Horton left town.

Alderman Schilp replied that his cabbage patch had been cleaned out and he had been pestered all summer.

"I'll appoint you pound master," replied the mayor with a smile while the fellow members of the common council smiled.

At this point Alderman Martin moved to adjourn.

Alderman Schilp interrupted to say "I'll accept."

"What, the office of pound master?" queried one of the city fathers.

"No, no, I meant I would accept Alderman Martin's motion to adjourn," replied Alderman Schilp hastily.

The motion to adjourn was carried and left some in doubt as to whether Alderman Schilp was pound master or not.

It is likely, however, that he is not.

Christmas Mail May Be Insured.

In giving out instructions for handling the rush of mail during the Christmas season, the postoffice department announces a new regulation by which shippers may insure parcels valued up to five dollars for three cents. In the same notice merchants and business houses generally are urged to use mailing tooks, which make filling in sender's coupons on insurance and C. O. D. forms unnecessary, and allow a duplicate record of shipments for the office and the shipper. Shippers are warned not to deposit parcels in regular mailing slots.

Cobleskill Man Named.

Commissioner Charles S. Wilson of the state department of agriculture has announced the appointment of Stanton C. Shaver of Cobleskill as deputy commissioner of agriculture.

DR H. J. HASELDEN.

PHYSICIAN WHO ALLOWED DEFORMED INFANT TO DIE.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Opprobrium and praise have been heaped on the head of Dr. Harry J. Haiselden of the German American Hospital here for his action in refusing to perform an operation which might have saved the life of six-day-old John Bollinger, deformed infant of Mrs. Anna Bollinger, who gave her consent to the doctor's action. Dr. Haiselden was convinced that with its mental and physical handicap the baby boy would grow up to be an imbecile and probably a criminal and decided to let nature take its course, resulting in the infant's death, rather than to operate. Medical authorities and sociologists all over the country have made the doctor's course of action a live issue for discussion.

Simple Enough.

A manufacturer of some patent compound came into the laboratory of an analytical chemist one day with a bottle containing an unwholesome looking mixture.

"I would give $20," he said to know what would make the water and oil in this mixture separate."

The chemist looked at the bottle.

"Very well," he said; "write out your check."

"Check?" the other echoed.

"Yes, your check for $20. You say you are willing to give that, and for that price I am willing to tell you what will make the water and oil separate."

The visitor hesitated a moment and then wrote a check for the sum named. The chemist carefully deposited it in his pocketbook, and then quietly dropped into the liquid a pinch of common salt. Instantly the water and oil separated, and whether the client was satisfied or not, he had got what he wanted, and he had paid his own price for it.—London Tit-Bits.

Luxury.

A noted criminologist was talking about the luxurious qualities of certain American prisons.

"Why," he said, "there was once a tramp to whom an old lady remarked:

"'You poor fellow; you look as if you had seen better days.'

"'And so I have, madam,' the tramp answered. 'I once dwelt in marble halls.'

"'And how,' said the old lady, 'did you come to lose such a nice home?'

"'Alas,' said the tramp, 'my term expired.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

AMIABLE JOSEFFY.

His Genial Courtesy and a Rebuff He Once Received.

Rafael Joseffy was among the most famous and also the most finished pianoforte players a generation ago and one of the most charming players of Chopin's music, I fancy, that ever lived. One of his most amiable traits was his want of artistic jealousy and his unfailing kindness and courtesy toward his colleagues. This no less when he was in the heyday of his popularity as a virtuoso than after he had retired from the platform to the regret and wonderment of his admirers, who were as numerous as the lovers of pianoforte music.

During the decade from 1880 to 1890 he really had no rival among the pianists who gave concerts in New York. His popularity burned with a steady and lambent flame no matter how much enthusiasm blazed up for these newcomers. All these Joseffy met in a spirit of unselfish sympathy. He took Conrad Ansorge under his wing, metaphorically speaking, and always treated him and spoke of him as if he were a peer, if not a better. He acclaimed Rosenthal and always hastened to the artist's room with his felicitations whenever a new candidate for public favor presented himself.

His conduct was not always appreciated or reciprocated, as an anecdote frequently repeated by his friends indicates. When De Pachmann gave his first recital in New York Joseffy was as usual among the first to offer his congratulations.

"Herr Pachmann," he said, "you played like a little god!"

"Who's the big god?" was the ungracious retort. "You, perhaps?"

But Joseffy expressed no resentment at the rebuff; he kept on admiring the admirable things in De Pachmann's playing just the same and also expressing it.—New York Tribune.

DR JOSEPH GORICAR

INSTIGATOR OF "SLUSH FUND" INVESTIGATION.

Dr. Joseph Goricar, former Austro-Hungarian Consul General at San Francisco, who charged through the Providence Journal a few days ago that Austro-Hungarian consuls in this country are concerned in plots to violate this country's laws, and that a huge fund to back such plots is maintained by the German and Austrian governments.

The Department of Justice at Washington has turned over to the State Department evidence that at least one foreign government's representatives have been active in plots to destroy munition factories and foment labor troubles. Dr. Goricar has turned over much evidence that he gathered concerning the activities of certain consuls.

Music of the Spheres.

The rising and the setting of the sun clearly prove that this globe is carried round in the space of twenty-four hours in an eternal and never ending circuit, and with incredible swiftness. I am not able to say whether the sound caused by the whirling about of so great a mass be excessive and therefore far beyond what our ears can perceive, nor, indeed, whether the resounding of so many stars, all carried on at the same time and revolving in their orbits, may not produce a delightful harmony of incredible sweetness. To us, who are in the interior, the world appears to glide silently along both by day and by night.—Pliny.

Course of the Moon.

The moon is erratic in its motions. The cause of the failure of astronomers to make the moon amenable to their exact mathematics, based on the dynamical laws of gravitation, is believed to be some attractive force of which we are at present ignorant, though in all probability one factor is the true shape of the earth, which still awaits accurate determination.

WITHER SPOON

MAY BE ALL-AMERICAN TACKLE.

Coach Bob Folwell, the former Pennsylvania star and now the football mentor at Washington and Jefferson, is firmly convinced that Witherspoon, the left tackle on the W. & J. team, deserves a place on the All-American team.

Witherspoon has much to commend him for the place. He is 21 years old, five feet, ten inches tall, weighs 185 pounds and plays football like a demon. This is his last year at W. & J. He never had a football suit on until he entered W. & J., and never tried for the team until two years ago. Next year he enters McCormick Theological Seminary. Football is now his whole life, however. Witherspoon is one of the best students in his class. He comes from Chambersburg, Pa., where he attended the high school but never did anything in athletics. He is strictly a "college find."

Listen to what Coach Folwell says of him:

"I consider Witherspoon the best all round tackle and most consistent I have ever seen play. He is brainy, aggressive and strong. He has never met his equal and has played against some of the best tackles in the country. There never was a finer man to work with and he has practically made himself in two years' experience, from a raw man, as far as football was concerned, into a finished, aggressive, powerful and brilliant tackle. He never played football before coming to W. & J., and his rise is due entirely to his love of the game, willingness to learn and determination to make good at anything he tries.

"No man ever deserved All-American honors more than he."

Forestalled.

One day Jones was rambling along the boulevard when he was hailed by his friend Smith. While talking Jones noticed that Smith continually rubbed the palm of his hand.

"What in the world is the matter with your hand?" he finally demanded. "You have been rubbing and scratching it ever since we stopped here."

"The palm itches like blazes," answered Smith. "They say that it is a sure sign that you are about to get some money."

"Um!" thoughtfully returned Jones as a great light suddenly dawned upon him. "Here is where you get wise to the fact that there is nothing in signs. I haven't a dollar to spare."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Horse Sense.

In "Tod Sloane," by himself, the once famous jockey says that a horse exceeds even a dog in intelligence and that if a thoroughbred were small enough to run about a house like a dog and have the same chances instead of being so much alone surprising results would follow. "Cussedness" in horses, he thinks, may be caused by too much inbreeding, bringing about an extraordinary temperament. The best jockey, says Sloane, is the boy with a nervous temperament. "He is quick and alert to take in a situation and becomes a human ferret, finding out things for himself."

Difficult.

The adjutant was lecturing to the subalterns of the battalion.

"In the field," he said, "it is now the duty of an officer to make himself look as much like a man as possible."

Everybody laughed.

"That is, I mean," he explained, "as much like a soldier as possible."—London Mirror.

WITHIN THE LAW

Tragedy That Came Into a Young Girl's Life

By HAROLD N. BRUNN

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Ward stood at the window of his office, looking down at the crowds that passed on the street below, but seeing only the one man of the thousands, the big boned, toil worn man who stood in the shadow of the county building.

Early in the afternoon Ward had seen him there and had laughed when he glimpsed the menacing fist that he had shaken in rage toward him. Two hours later he had laughed again to see that the man held his watch station.

Now, as the electric lights threw into relief the watching face Ward tried to laugh and could not. There was something so ominous in the pitiful, sullen face that he bit his lips in nervous annoyance before he turned to his stenographer.

"That old fellow takes it pretty hard, doesn't he?" he asked her.

"Yes, sir." The girl did not look up from her machine.

She knew the man on the opposite side of the street from his frequent visits to Ward's office, and she had known that he watched Ward with the open defiance of an enemy since that day when Ward had told him that his patent was worthless.

That had been the day he had told Ward that he had no more money, could secure no more money. Accustomed as she was to playing the buffer between the attorney and the world he successfully defrauded, calloused in spite of her youth to the game of devil take the hindmost, the thought of Ivan Sederstrom disturbed her.

"Where does Sederstrom live?" Ward asked her.

"Somewhere on the northwest side," she replied. "I have his address if you want it."

"It doesn't matter," Ward declared. "Does he live alone?"

"No. He has his wife and four children. One of them is a cashier in a restaurant somewhere downtown. Maybe he's waiting for her now."

"Perhaps," said Ward.

He took up the evening newspaper on the stenographer's desk, scanning carefully his own advertisement:

FREE! FREE! FREE!
Send for my free book. It tells how to get a patent.
Fortunes have been made on inventions. Invent something and send me a pencil drawing for a free opinion, or, better still, call for an interview.
Don't apply for a patent until you have seen me.
Remember that I do not charge anything for consultation.
Send for my free book.
DO IT NOW! SAMUEL WARD,
Patent Attorney.

"Any one waiting?" he asked the girl.

"Yes, sir."

"Worth while?"

She shrugged her shoulders, then went to the door at Ward's nod and summoned the waiting man in the anteroom.

He came in nervously, giving her a glance that would have been shrewd

"THAT OLD FELLOW TAKES IT PRETTY HARD, DOESN'T HE?"

but for its fright—a man of nervous eagerness of manner as he sat forward on the edge of a chair, hastily telling Ward of how he had seen the advertisement and had brought to him a sketch of his invention.

Ward glanced at the drawing, then took from his desk a receipt book in which he wrote as he said:

"You'll have it patented, of course."

"Well, I'm not sure," the man hesitated.

"Oh, it's necessary." He handed the man a receipt.

"For what?" the other asked.

"For $10 to cover the first costs."

The stenographer went toward the window, gazing down at the place where Ivan Sederstrom had stood through the afternoon. His course with Ward had begun just as this other man's was beginning—$10, $75, $20, $10 more for incidentals, $80 for finals, $10 more—and what had he?

Ward was talking convincingly to his caller. He would acquire him, of course. He always did. She saw the man give the attorney a bill. Then he went out, transformed by the hope Ward had given him in payment. Ward looked up.

"Old fellow still there?" he demanded.

"No, sir."

"Well, I don't like the way he's acting. Has Bliss telephoned today?"

"No, sir."

"Nor Cvericki?"

"No, but some protective association telephoned about his case. They said they'd send their lawyer to you tomorrow."

Ward frowned; then he looked at his watch.

"Please call the railroad office," he said as he reached for his hat, "and tell them to reserve me a berth tonight for St. Louis. Say, you don't know where I'm gone. I'll be back in two weeks. Pay the running expenses from the bank account." And he slammed out of the office.

Ward had not chosen his way of journeying when he left Chicago. When he saw the City of Savannah tied to the St. Louis docks—a huge, flat bottomed sternwheeler looking for all the world like a pouter pigeon floating on the muddy waters of the Mississippi, he decided his course.

An hour later he was standing at the rail, watching the negroes shambling back and forth at their stevedore tasks and watching, too, the flaxen haired girl whose eager interest in every incident of the scene emphasized its charm for the man near her.

She was vivid for her type of blondness, and as the boat swung out in response to the clanging bells of the engine room, Ward lazily calculated that her eyes were the source of her compelling power. They were eager, luminous blue eyes that demanded vital excitement from life.

He did not see her again until the next morning. Life on a Mississippi river boat demands no haste.

Later, before the boat swung out of the shore fog, he found her alone, looking down to where the stevedores kept at their hastened tasks and their liquid speech of protest against hurry.

"Fine lot of coons!" he observed with a laugh.

The girl turned to him without self consciousness.

"They have to work so hard, poor fellows," she said as if in apology for the negroes' shambling way of toil.

"Poor fellows!" Ward chuckled. "Why, they're the laziest loafers ever allowed to breathe. Not one of them would work if he could get along without eating. If the progress of the world depended on them the world would stop. Now, a white man works for power, for wealth, for women."

The girl smiled a little bitterly, Ward thought.

"You can put your whole idea in one word," she said. "Just say money."

Ward shrugged his shoulders while the laughter came to his eyes.

"And if you're right?" he asked.

"Oh, I am," she declared. "And the rest of the creed is that the wisest man is the one who does least and who gets most."

"You can put your whole idea in one word," he said. "Just say money."

Ward shrugged his shoulders while the laughter came to his eyes.

"And if you're right?" he asked.

"Oh, I am," she declared. "And the rest of the creed is that the wisest man is the one who does least and who gets most."

When the supper bell summoned them Ward stopped the girl as she rose to go.

"Won't you tell me your name?" he asked her. "Here I've told you nearly all I know about myself, and I've not an idea who you are."

The girl hesitated.

"I came away from Chicago to forget all about who and what I am," she said. "I've been trying to make this a fairy wandering. Won't you let it go at that? I shall not know who you are, and you're not to know me as anything but Helen."

"Be it agreed," he laughed.

Mrs. Wilson, a woman whose apparent weariness of mind and of body seemed to detach her from everything but her deck chair, made a background for their deepening comradeship as the boat plowed down the river.

Perhaps it was because Ward found the blue eyed girl of mystery an exhilarating game of chance that he made his plans of travel conform with Mrs. Wilson's, so that the three of them saw New Orleans together.

They came to the point of goodby with such apparent lack of deeper interest on her part that Ward was nettled into returning to Chicago days earlier than he had intended.

"I don't believe you wanted me to come back with you," he said on the night before the train was due to bring them to the city of their homes.

"I'm not sure that I did," the girl said. "You know, the river was a sort of fairy journey for me, and I was willing to end the fairy tale with the end of the journey."

"But that's not fair," said Ward. "The more I see of you the mo want to see of you. Can't we often when we're back in Chicago?

"You may not care for me when know me then," the girl said. "I've fit in with your ideas of life just now," she went on, "because I've just seemed of your class. But my folks are poor. We live in four rooms, and I can't imagine you in any of them."

"Well, I'll tell you what we'll do," Ward said. "If you won't see me after we say goodby in Chicago, let's end the trip in a blaze of glory. Let's pretend that it's not Chicago we are coming to in the morning, but some strange city you've never seen. Let me take you around as I did in New Orleans."

The girl said nothing, but Ward saw the flame of desire rising in her blue eyes. "But Mrs. Wilson has an important business appointment," she objected. "That's why we came right back. You know, she just took me with her as a companion."

"Is it downtown?" Ward asked with that practical ability that made his success.

"Yes, at 10 o'clock."

"Take her to whatever place she has to go," Ward advised. "Then meet me ten minutes later at the corner of Michigan and Jackson. I'll be waiting for you with my racer. We'll take a spin out in the country, come back to town and have supper. We'll make it a red letter day before we say goodby. Won't you?"

The lines around the girl's mouth hardened.

"I've had so little fun in my life," she said bitterly, "that I'll take the chance—for once. I'll meet you."

It was an enchanted day that Ward and the girl whirled through, a day of soft breezes, of flashing scenes of spring, of flowers and flattery, of a vista of luxury that dizzied her more than the wine he took at dinner intoxicated the man.

His blazing eyes when he turned to her with a request to name the place where they should dine startled her out of the dream. "I think I'd better go home," she stammered.

"Not on your life," he laughed.

He threw open the wheel to the third speed, and the car plunged forward, speeding down the boulevards toward the congested loop district.

After they crossed the bridge Ward had to slow down, but the restless daring of his forward gaze never abated. He threaded his way jerkily through the mazes of the late evening traffic. A crossing policeman shouted a warning to him as he led the arrested stream at the whistle's signal. A man had run out in front of the racer.

HE WAS LYING SWATHED IN BANDAGES.

The girl saw him struck, then lifted and flung against the curb.

After that she had a vague sense of being in the center of an excited crowd. She saw Ward taken from the wheel and almost lifted to a patrol. She saw the injured man being raised to the ambulance cot.

A half dozen strangers helped her to board a car. Still in the daze of fear, she came to her home.

Her mother was standing over the kitchen stove. Her sister was setting the table. Two little boys were studying their lessons under the glow of the lamp. They all welcomed her joyously, but she flung herself into her mother's arms.

"What's the matter?" her mother cried.

The girl tried to speak. The four in the room stared at her in half terrified wonder at her silence and her grief. A knock sounded on the door. The grocer from the store below them was standing there.

"Mrs. Sederstrom," he said, "you're to come at once. Your husband was hurt downtown by an automobile. He is at the County hospital."

"You knew?" her mother asked her.

"I didn't know it was father," the girl cried. Then her voice was lost in sobbing.

At the hospital they found Ivan Sederstrom. He was lying swathed in bandages, his mouth and eyes alone free. The nurse shook her head in negation to Helen's mute question. Ivan Sederstrom was dying. The girl leaned down to hear his words.

"You want fifty dollars more?" he was saying. "But I've given you hundreds; all I have. And you say it's no good? No good? My work of a lifetime?" The girl tried to call him. "Where are you going?" he asked her.

Then he slipped off into unconsciousness. Death came and sealed his closed eyes. The nurse folded his calloused hands.

On the day that Ivan Sederstrom was buried Ward stood at his office window watching the surging crowds on the street below. The jury had exonerated him of guilt in the death of the man. No one knew of his business connection with the workman.

He sighed with a relief at the verdict and a more vivid relief that the sullen face of the angry man would never again be raised to his window.

Then he sighed again in a fleeting regret for the memory of the girl who had slipped out of his life after a week of dreams. Somewhere in the city she might be, but how was he to find her? And if he did—

The stenographer came in to announce the return of the visitor who had been there on the evening Ward went away. Ward hesitated. Then he turned away from the window.

"Show him in," he said.

ROBERTS WILL IN HIGHEST COURT

Before the court of appeals in Albany on Friday were heard arguments in an appeal in connection with the final settlement of the accounts of Frank B. Lown of Poughkeepsie as executor of Dr. Charles H. Roberts, deceased, a wealthy physician of Highland. The appeal, which was taken by Thornton D. Roberts and Frances P. Roberts, is from an order of the Third Appellate Division unanimously affirming a decree of the Ulster county surrogate's court allowing the account of Mr. Lown as executor, including attorney's fees paid by him. Prior to the death of Dr. Roberts he made a will providing for a trust of the major part of his estate with remainder to his children. He had made substantial loans or advances to most of his children who agreed among themselves that whatever they owed the estate should be repaid to it. Subsequently the execution of another will by Dr. Roberts was obtained in which will it was provided that all the children and their mother should share equally in the estate. Upon the death of the doctor this second will providing for equal distribution among the widow and children was admitted to probate. An appeal was taken by interested parties, who were subsequently induced to withdraw their appeal by substantial payments to them by Frances P. Roberts, one of the children, entitled to a share under the second will. Dr. Roberts was 89 years old. Argued by Selden Bacon for appellant; Howard Chipp for appellant-respondent; Danforth E. Ainsworth for executor-respondent.

Crescents to Play K. of C.

On Monday evening the fast Crescent Basketball Club of this city will play the Knights of Columbus Five of Newburgh at Washington Hall on Abeel street. Since their defeat by the Hudson Five a short time ago the Crescents have put in some hard practice and they expect to register their first win of the season, at the expense of the Newburgh Club. "Jud" Galloway the former manager of the Clark Five, when they represented Newburgh in the Hudson River League, is handling the reins of the Newburgh Knights and reports from the down river city credit the Knights with being the fastest semi-professional team that has ever represented that place. As we are well aware of Galloway's ability to pick a basketball player we readily accept the foregoing report. Nevertheless, they are certain to strike a snag when they tackle the Crescents, as the locals have struck their gait and it will take an unusually fast team to outscore them in the future. Their has been a large advance sale of tickets for the game, so a big crowd is certain to be present. A large delegation of the Kingston branch of the Knights will be in attendance to root their brother Knights on to victory. McLean's orchestra will furnish the music for dancing, which will follow the game. The game will start promptly at 8:30 in order to give plenty of time for dancing.

Called to New York Church.

The Rev. Daniel G. Verway, for seven and a half years the pastor of the Wallkill Reformed Church, has received a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Union Reformed Church of Highbridge, New York city, which has a membership of 300. Mr. Verway came to Wallkill directly from the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N. J., and during his pastorate the Wallkill Church has enjoyed a period of prosperity. One hundred and eighty-five members have been added to the roll and a debt of $1,000 on the church property has been paid, while over $3,000 have been paid for improvements and repairs. The Sunday school has constantly increased in attendance and all departments of the church work are efficiently organized.

Potted Plants.

When potting plants put a piece of coarse muslin over the hole in the pot before putting in the bits of stone and bod, which keeps the drainage good. The muslin prevents the earth from washing away.

SOCIETY NOTES.

A buffet supper was given the members of the Loyal Friends Aid Society by the president, Mrs. Sam Bernstein at her home on Pearl street last night. A delightful musical program was rendered which was followed by dancing. All congratulated the hostess upon the good time given.

During the evening Victrola and vocal selections were rendered and dancing was also enjoyed. The hostess served a sumptuous supper that was voted the best ever. Mrs. Barnhart received many beautiful presents, among them a large bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Among those present were: Mrs. Barnhart, Mrs. Maines, Mrs. A. Arnold, Mrs. E. Arnold, Mrs. Kirchner, Mrs. Struby, Mrs. Ginsburgh, Mrs. Selfridge, Miss Mabel Barnhart, Miss Agnes Krengloskie, Miss Mary Straily, Miss Clarisa Cramer, Miss Anna Barnhart, Miss Alice Wilson, Miss Nellie Selfridge and John Barnhart, Mr. Smith, Daniel Barnhart and Charles Thomas.

Dr. George Chandler has just returned from New York, where he has made final arrangements with the professional dancers whose art will make the Butterfly Ball a memorable occasion. It has been decided, after consultation with the ballet mistress, Madam Inkret, to arrange the program in two parts. Part one will be a descriptive dance—pantomime, illustrating the awakening of spring and the birth of the butterfly. Irail Godescov will represent the spirit of spring and Miss Ellen Hasbrouck of this city will be the butterfly. Sixteen young ladies of Kingston will form the ballet. Part two of the program will consist of a group of dances by Lada. In the intervals between her solo dances, there will be demonstrations of period ball room dancing, showing the gradual changes in costumes and manner from 1860 to the present time. These dances will be done by local talent under the instruction of Madam Inkret. Tickets for the ball are now on sale in all the drug stores of Kingston. Also at Forsyth & Davis's, Winter's music store and the Woman's Exchange.

To Aid The Butterfly Ball.

At a regular meeting of the Daughters of Isabella on Thursday, it was voted that the organization take entire charge of the lemonade booth at the Butterfly Ball, and committees were appointed to arrange all details.

The Monday Club and the Lowell Club have agreed to furnish a certain number of butterflies, the Monday Afternoon Sewing Club is headquarters for all butterflies, furnishing patterns and keeping count, the Ulster Garden Club has charge of the floral decorations, the Atharhacton Club is making flowers, and individual circles of interested women are meeting almost every afternoon in different parts of the city to cut, paste and paint, showing the widespread interest in the Kingston City hospital. Miss Anne Heaney is getting together a group of women who will make the smokers' corner of the armory an attractive place where the best cigars and cigarettes are for sale at regular prices.

TEUTONIC ARMIES OVERRUN SERVIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Nov. 20.—Every city and town of importance in Servia with the exception of Ochrida, is now in the possession of the Teutonic allies.

South of Monastir and at Kosturum the Bulgarians are making furious efforts to press the Servian and Anglo-French forces back into Greece so as to precipitate a situation which will force the Greek government to take decisive action one way or another.

The chief feature of interest in the political phase of the Balkan situation was the reported engagement of Lord Kitchener, the British war secretary, to meet King Constantine in Athens tday.

Dispatches from Vienna and Bucharest indicate that the main Servian army, 50,000 strong, led by King Peter and Marshal Putnik, has been surrounded on three sides and its retreat is being seriously menaced by the advance of the Teutonic allies.

Although the German and Austrian war offices claim steady progress in northern Servia, they give few details of the operations. The Austro-Hungarian forces in the Sanjak of Novibazar are engaging the Servian forces defending the mountain stronghold.

In southern Servian the Bulgarians are marching upon the city of Ochrida, which is only a few miles from the Greek frontier.

The Bulgar force which captured Monastir is rushing on toward the southwest, while the retreating Serbs are fighting rear guard actions in an effort to capture it.

Violent efforts are being made by the Bulgarians in that region to force the Servians across the boundary into Greece. In that event Greece will be compelled to show her hand as a supporter of either the entente powers or the Teuton allies.

Strong attacks are being made by the Bulgars against the French troops on the Kosturum front. Kosturum is a mile inside of the Bulgarian border, north of Rabrovo.

Winter weather has set in throughout the mountain districts and the troops are compelled to march through deep snow. However, the cold weather has not been without its benefits. It has dried up the deep mud on the mountain roads.

Denis Cochin, of the French government, who went to Athens upon a joint military and political mission, has arrived at Salonika following a series of conferences with Greek officials in Athens.

Dr. Rutsen E. Asher, since 1906 a resident of Barryville, Sullivan county, died of heart failure Thursday morning at the age of 52 years. He was born in Rhinebeck, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Asher and had been engaged in the practice of medicine for over 30 years. In 1884, he was united in marriage with Miss Josephine Menzies of Delhi, Delaware county, N. Y., who survives him. Dr. Asher belonged to a Holland family which came to this section in Colonial days. He left Rhinebeck about 1885 and settled in Sparrowbush, near Port Jervis, where he practiced for several years. He returned to Rhinebeck in 1888 and while practicing there his health failed. He then turned his attention to life insurance for some years, subsequently locating in Barryville.

Mrs. Julia Hart Fuller, widow of David H. Fuller, died at her home on Center Street, Ellenville, on Thursday morning of this week, as a result of a stroke of paralysis, which she suffered about three weeks ago. Mrs. Fuller has been a life-long resident of Ellenville, being a daughter of Silas Hart, and in her younger days a teacher in our village schools. She was a member of the M. E. Church, and also of the W. C. T. U., of this place. In both organizations she was an active and efficient worker and will be greatly missed in both church and home circles. Mrs. Fuller was about seventy-five years of age, and was preceded in death by her husband about nine years ago. She is survived by the following children: Mrs. George F. Andrews, of Ellenville; the Rev. Hart S. Fuller, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Elam H and Lewis B. Fuller, Brooklyn; Mrs. Arthur C. Blass, of Pittsfield, Mass. and Miss Ruth Fuller of Perth Amboy, N. J. The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her late home with interment in Fantinekill cemetery.

To Guard Church Sunday.

Members of the faction of the Italian Catholic Church in Poughkeepsie who are in arms over the transfer of Father Pavone to New York have telephoned to archdiocesan headquarters in New York: "There will be no mass said in the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel on Sunday morning by Father Lalli. We do not want blood to stain the steps of the church, but we will guard the doors against the man we do not want, and Father Lalli will never say mass there."

YOUNG CENTRALS WIN AT ASHOKAN

The Young Centrals defeated the Ashokan Reserves Friday night in a game of basketball at the Ashokan Amusement Hall by the close score of 19 to 17. It was the hardest fought game ever played on the Ashokan court. Both teams put up a great fight and the game was in doubt until the last two minutes of play, when Hughes made a sensational one-handed backward shot which won the game for the Centrals. The feature of the game was the playing of Davis and Gowser for Ashokan and for the Young Centrals the great guarding of J. Rourke, which brought the spectators to their feet, and the nifty shooting of Gregory at critical moments. B. Rourke, Kiernan and Leuffgen put up their usual good game and they were applauded for their fine work. Lineup and summary.

Had No Jurisdiction.

Friday evening the suit of Jacob Avnet, the Strand clothier, against Edward Malia, to recover an agent's commission for the sale of the Riverview Hotel, came up for trial in city court. This suit was certified to Recorder Lang for trial by City Judge Brinnier as the city had acted as Mr. Malia's attorney in a recent suit in supreme court. The certificate stated it was sent to the recorder for trial by consent. When the case was called that evening W. H. Grogan, attorney for Mr. Malia, raised an objection that the recorder had no jurisdiction because the certificate stated it had been sent over by consent and he had not consented to it and that therefore Recorder Lang had no jurisdiction. Recorder Lang decided that consent was not necessary but that since he acquired jurisdiction through the certificate and the certificate did not state any cause covered by section 74 of the city charter he had no jurisdiction in the matter. Andrew J. Cook, who appeared for Mr. Avnet, did not oppose the motion. This means that Mr. Avnet, if he desires to sue Mr. Malia, will have to commence his action all over again.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

It's just a trifle over seven months since Jess Willard became the heavyweight champion, but in that time he has earned approximately $214,000—and not one dollar of it via the fight route.

Willard spent 140 days doing circus stunts. He was guaranteed $1,000 a day—and he averaged $1,200. That made his income from that source total $168,000. He got $25,000 from his newspaper writings and another $20,000 or so through his theatrical venture.

$214,000 in 8 months! Yes, Oscar, it surely pays to be a champion.

Of his income, however, it is said that Willard only got 60 per cent of the gross—about $120,000—the balance being divided among his managers. Tom Jones, chief manager for Willard, recently said that Willard has "salted" away a sum close to $100,000 despite the fact that he paid $33,000 to Harry Frazee and Lawrence Webber when he bought out their managerial interest in him.

And now Willard plans to go back into the fighting game where $30,000 purses await him. If he retains his championship as long as his heavyweight predecessors, it looks as if his hopes will be realized—the earning of $500,000 before his pugilistic star sets.

Heavies Desert Noo Yawk.

There is a big void in New York just now—but it can't exactly be called an aching one. The void has been caused by the sudden exodus of the leading heavyweights.

Frank Moran is doing the theatricals somewhere in the middle west. Jim Coffey is "resting up" in the mountains. Jack Dillon has flitted back to the west; Charley Weinert is "vacationing" somewhere and the lesser lights in the heavyweight firmaments are shining in parts distant from Gotham.

Ritchie's Decision a Good One.

If Willie Ritchie really invades the welterweight class it will boom that division, because it is certain that many other "overweight" lightweights will begin battling in that department.

Jack Britton, Kid Lewis, Jimmy Duffy, Matt Wells, Johnny Griffiths and many others who have grown too bulky to be genuine lightweights probably would welcome a chance to enter the welterweight department if they were assured of getting fights. The main reason why those fellows have lingered in the lightweight division is because there are few active welterweights and that means but little business for them.

However, if Ritchie joins the welters, it will add prestige to that division, renew activity and start a real demand on the part of the fans for welterweight bouts.

Bat Nelson is Through.

Battling Nelson, [illegible] fighter. The Dane is through as a fighter. The Dane's durability of the "Durable Dane" seems to have gone forever. He appeared old punch long ago disappeared—and Nelson today, as a fighter, seems to be but a skeleton of the Nelson of other days.

Bat put up a really wonderful fight in Havana last spring against Jimmy Fryor, but it seems that fight burned out the last fire. It took from him all that was left as a relic of the days when he was king of the lightweight division.

Nelson made a woeful showing in Kansas City recently against a second rater, and that bout has written the word "finis" on the career of the most popular lad that ever was a champion.

Some Sweet Game.

After much disputing as to who are the best basketball players working in Derrenbecher's candy factory, the candy makers will play the shipping clerks for the champions of the shop. The lineup will be as follows:

Candy Makers—F. C. Brodie, manager; J. L. Brown, captain; A. H. Brew, f; L. Peterson, c; C. Roscoe, rg; A. E. Riley, lg; G. Wolff, J. Harlow, F. Post, subs.

Shipping Clerks—Irving Brown, manager; Herbert Wolff, captain; H. Derrenbacher, f; E. Ross, c; C. Mellert, rg; I. Brown, lg; G. Hotaling, J. Knox, M. Hickey, subs.

Manager Brodie said they (the shipping clerks) might be able to ship the candy but he don't think they can ship the ball to the basket. Manager Irving Brown said the candy makers might be able to pull the candy but he did not think they will be able to pull themselves in the game Tuesday evening. Captain J. L. Brown said his three men from Vermont, Brew, Riley and Roscoe, could beat them alone. The game is to be played in Washington Hall on Tuesday evening, November 23. Happy Wolff, referee.

Tonight's Games.

Kingston at Stamford.
Jersey City at Paterson.

In a rapid fire basketball game Friday evening, the local league team defeated the Jersey City quintet by a scor of 25 to 21, in an interesting contest, in which the foul shooting of the vsitors aided materially in the Jerseyites scoring, they making thirteen points from the foul line.

The visitors had the best team seen on the local court this season. Early in the game "Chief" Muller hung up four points for the visitors, which was overcome by Wachter, Tome and Johnson scoring six points, while the visitors registered two more. After the score had been tied the locals forged to the front and were never overtaken. At one time during the second period Morgenwick's clan were ten points ahead, which was gradually cut down by the visitors, who finished only four points behind the locals.

The work of the old reliable "Heinie" Henschel was the outstanding factor of the game. Whenever the team needed a few points he would manage to break through and get set for one of his famous shots, and in a few seconds another score had been added to the locals' points. Tome, the locals' pivot man, was also a brilliant performer, he holding the ball in his possession during the last minute of play, which apparently stopped the visitors from scoring another point.

The game furnished some encouraging incidents for the local fans, notably that Kingston is leading the league, and also the bitterly fought contest which was waged. These incidents should draw record crowds to the armory, for a game such as was staged Friday evening can not be beat, it being interesting from start to finish, keeping the fans worked up to a high pitch of enthusiasm throughout the entire forty minutes of play.

While the playing of Henschel and Tome was prominent, the work of Barger, Johnson and Wachter comes in for its share of praise. These three players showed flashes of speed, which carried the ball in the basket on many difficult plays, adding to the locals' score at the opportune moment.

The all-around aggressiveness of the visitors while in possession of the ball made them appear formidable, were able to advance down the floor rapidly only to be stopped by the local guards when near the basket. Referee Brennan generally calling a foul on the local men on these plays, some of which were just, and others which appeared to many spectators as favoring the visitors, according to the harmony of the voices, which appeared to be against the ruling of this competent official.

This evening the local aggregation have a game scheduled at Stamford with the Connecticut team. The players are confident of winning their first out of town game at Stamford. Playing a game such as was staged Friday evening, there is no reason why the Kingston quintet should not be the winners over the Stamford crew.

Better Industrial Relations.

That eventually the entire country will come to see that it is better for employer and employe to thresh out their differences between themselves rather than to accept the old theory that "no good can possibly come from the other side" was the keynote of an address delivered before the National Founders' Association in New York by State Industrial Commissioner Lewis Wiard.

There will be no meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian Church at 6:30 o'clock Sunday evening because of the Union Thanksgiving services.

Annual Fair Nov. 30-Dec. 1.

The annual fair of the Wurts Street Baptist Church will be held in the chapel on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 30 and December 1. On Tuesday evening from 5 to 8 o'clock a delicious chicken pie supper will be served, and let it be said right here that the ladies of the Baptist Church are famous for their chicken pie suppers. On Wednesday evening an interesting entertainment has been arranged for. The ladies of the church have made great preparations for the event. The decorations have been left to a competent committee and will be of an elaborate nature. The booths will contain many fancy and useful articles very suitable for dainty Christmas gifts.
